Capitalism and Freedom - Wikipedia

Capitalism is an economic system that emerged in Europe during the 16th and 17th centuries in which private companies, rather than the state, control trade and industry. Capitalism is organized around the concept of capital (the ownership and control of the means of production by those who employ workers to produce goods and services). In practical terms, this creates an economy built on the ...

Centesimus Annus (1 May 1991) | John Paul II

Friedman concludes Capitalism and Freedom with his "classical liberal" (more accurately, libertarian) stance, that government should stay out of matters that do not need and should only involve itself when absolutely necessary for the survival of its people and the country. He recounts how the best of a country's abilities come from its free markets while its failures come from government ...

Thus freedom, which too often asserts itself as a claim for autonomy by opposing the freedom of others, will develop in its deepest human reality: to involve itself and to spend itself in building up active and lived solidarity. But, for the Christian, it is by losing himself in God who sets him free that man finds true freedom, renewed in the death and resurrection of the Lord.

In James Cone’s Black Liberation Theology (The Fortieth Anniversary Edition) I encountered a black approach to the Liberation Theology which to me was made popular originally in South America by Gustavo Gutierrez. My understanding of Liberation Theology stems from the fact that I was born in Chile and experienced the attempts there to see this theological prism imposed upon the faithful. The ...
